Attachment & early intervention: Improving emotional wellbeing and relationships in the family, and at school

Emanuel Miller Memorial Lecture & National Conference

Friday 8 March 2019, 09.00 – 17.00, Royal College of Physicians, London

About the discussions

Professor David Olds, 'Using Randomized Clinical Trials of the Family-Nurse Partnership to Inform Policy, Practice, and Developmental Science'

I will use our experience in developing, testing, and replicating the Nurse-Family Partnership to address the following questions:

- How can we design early parental interventions to maximize their likelihood of working?
- How can we design research to build a strong evidence-base for early-intervention?
- How can we scale evidence-based early interventions to maximize their societal impact?

Professor Tamsin Ford, 'The incredible years teacher programme – update on recent trials'

- Why schools are such an important setting to consider in relation to child mental health
- Insights from the STARS trial of teacher classroom management – very early intervention
- Opportunities and costs that may arise from the government Green paper

Professor Marinus H. van IJzendoorn, 'The vicious cycle of early harsh and insensitive parenting: how much is inherited, how does it affect the brain, and how can we break it?'

- New insights from twin and family-tree studies into the heritability of harsh and insensitive parenting
- How parenting is embedded in the brain, and why this does not prevent us from supporting parents to realize their potential
- What attachment-inspired parenting support programs can contribute to parenting, and who are most susceptible to interventions

Professor Gordon Harold, 'Revisiting the Nature of Nurture: Promoting Children's Positive Mental Health in a Digital World'

- Focus on early family and school environment influences on children
- Emphasis on vulnerable populations, family/school interventions, relevance of digital world (risks and opportunities) and practice orientated implications/recommendations

Professor Pasco Fearon, 'Myth-busting around attachment theory'

- Understanding the complex mix of factors, including maltreatment, involved in the development of disorganized attachment.
- Understanding the complex relationships between insecurity of attachment and children's mental health.
- Understanding whether and how parental attachment style affects parenting and children's attachments
