About the day

Supporting the mental health needs of children and young people in an educational setting is fast becoming an essential skill.

The government's recent green paper, 'Transforming children and young people's mental health provision', has placed a clear emphasis on providing mental health support for children and young people within their educational settings.

But how can you do this effectively?

This exciting conference combines presentations from Academic Researchers from both an education and health background on this hottest of topics. The conference will also have presentations from inspiring speakers who are witnessing the scope and scale of this issue at the frontline.

Learning Outcomes

- Detailed understanding of mental health needs of children and young people within education settings
- Practical tips and advice to theory into practice with innovative approaches for support
- Lived experienced examples and case studies

Who should attend

SENCOs, Teachers (primary, secondary, and Higher Education), Educational Psychologists, Mental Health Professionals Local Government Officers (Education / CYP Support Services, Social Care.)
